

1st International Conference on Ion Analysis (ICIA 2018)

Covering all Methods of Ion Analysis and all Fields of Application

Technical University of Berlin, Germany
September 9-13, 2018

ICIA 2018 as a truly international event is continuing the very successful biannual series of Conferences on Ion Analysis (CIA) which was initiated in 2001, the last being held in 2013.

The formerly Conference on Ion Analysis (CIA) has established as a unique platform for the meeting and communication of scientists from universities, research centres, industry and governmental institutions with companies that produce and distribute products related to ion analysis in its widest sense. However, the format of CIA was mainly orientated to a German speaking auditorium with participation of international, English speaking, invited lecturers.

The aim of ICIA is to tie in the CIA concept and, according to the motto “A single method is no method”, to cover all aspects of ion analysis with respect to the variety of methods, instrumental configurations and areas of application. The programme of ICIA 2018 will be arranged with invited keynote lectures and special sessions in order to present most recent developments, to review analytical methodologies for ion analysis and to draw attention to practical problems and their solutions.

For scientists applying ion analysis in routine ICIA 2018 will be an opportunity to present their challenging work and - often tiresome - practical experience with the various methods used thus contributing to the stimulation of further methodological and instrumental developments.

Manufacturers of instrumentation for ion analysis and supplementary materials are regarded to be the necessary interface between research and development and application. In order to acknowledge this important role the participating companies, beside their exhibition, get considerable space in the lecture and poster programme for presenting their portfolios and solutions to existing practical problems.

We appreciate your interest in ICIA 2018 and look forward to welcoming you in Berlin.
